Special Edition on Evidence-Based Approaches and Practises in Phenomenology
Guest Editors: Kathleen Galvin and Sally Borbasi

The Guest Editors of this Special Edition, which deals with evidence-based approaches and practises within a phenomenological attitude, both come from the nursing profession. Moreover, both are active phenomenological researchers who, over the courses of their respective careers, have developed a strong interest in the so-called 'lifeworld' approaches to better understand everyday living and experiencing.

Professor Sally Borbasi, an Australian academic, together with Professor Kathleen Galvin (United Kingdom) have long been engaging with diverse intellectual debates, and actively participating in symposia around extending the lifeworld approach to everyday caring practice, not only in the nursing profession but equally so in the broader social sciences. It was out of a series of these challenging intellectual dialogues that the idea was formed that a phenomenological approach to the lifeworld could be appropriately consolidated through the release of a Special Edition focusing on evidence based approaches and practises.

Both Kate and Sally decided that any such Special Edition should comprise a balance of philosophical contemplations together with empirical illustrations. In order to ensure this, a diverse range of contributors was approached. Consequently, readers will find themselves exposed to theoretical reflections on epistemology through to phenomenological accounts of bodyliness and embodied knowing, transformative relationships, the notion of body-world unity, and the phenomenological understanding that the intra-personal, interpersonal, and social agency are a single ongoing process as well as the notion of evidence in phenomenological thought. Additionally, there is discussion around how the human condition can be understood by the use of film and its exposition through the lens of a lifeworld framework, just as literary texts can be used to evoke comprehensive understandings of lived experiences.

It is the belief of the journal's Editorial Board that the release of Special Editions dedicated to particular focus areas, help to consolidate the broadly-based phenomenological project since readers are able to reflect, contemplate, interrogate and challenge the value of phenomenological thinking through the single portal of a focussed but diverse compilation of integrated papers presenting robust philosophical considerations and rich phenomenological understandings of the human condition.

We encourage you to enjoy the feast.

About the Author

Professor Christopher Stones, previously of Rhodes University in Grahamstown, South Africa and currently Professor of Psychology in the Faculty of Humanities at the University of Johannesburg, has enjoyed a lengthy academic and research career, in the course of which he has taught in the areas of physiological, clinical, forensic, social and research psychology. He is Vice-President of the South African Association for Psychotherapy and past Chairman of the South African Society for Clinical Psychology. Editor-in-Chief of the Indo-Pacific Journal of Phenomenology since 2003, he is also on the editorial panels of two other online journals. Using both natural scientific quantitative methodologies and phenomenological approaches, Professor Stones's research interests are in the areas of identity, attitudes and attitude change, phenomenological praxis and methodologies, abnormal psychology and psychotherapy, and spirituality and religious experience, in all of which areas he has published extensively.

An Associate Fellow of the British Psychological Society, with which he is registered as a Chartered Psychologist, Professor Stones is licensed with the South African Professional Board as both a research and a clinical psychologist, and conducts a part-time clinical practice with particular focus on adolescents, young adults and families, as well as offering long-term psychotherapy. In addition, he is regularly called on to serve as an "expert witness" in medico-legal (civil and criminal) court proceedings, and to contribute as a consultant in the field of forensic investigation.
