RITUAL INNOVATION IN NUMBERS 18?

Esias E. Meyer
University of Pretoria

Abstract

The paper engages with Numbers 18 in the light of the recent debate on ritual innovation. The focus is especially on verses 8-20 and the ‘portion’ of the priests, or more specifically the Aaronides. The intertextual links between Numbers 18 and other texts in Leviticus are first explored, including texts referring to the firstborn and the ban in Leviticus 27, but also Leviticus 3 and possible links with the peace offering. The article then seeks to find clarity on the diachronic relation between these different texts, before venturing into the debate on ritual innovation. Eventually the article also explores the obvious interests of the priests and how ritualised texts are used in the service of economic innovation.

Key Words: Ritual Innovation (Rituale innovasie); Numbers (Numeri); First born (Eersgeborene); Cult (Kultus); Sacrifice (Offer)

Introduction

In the introduction to a book on ritual innovation written in 2016, Nathan MacDonald writes:

At first blush ‘ritual innovation’ would appear to be an oxymoron. What is ritual, if not a stereotyped behaviour that has to be practised consistently in order to be effective?

In the rest of that essay MacDonald makes the point that some biblical critics have somehow been resistant to the idea that rituals can change or can even be invented, but that ritual theorists such as Catherine Bell and Ronald Grimes insist that those of us who think that ritual innovation is ‘counter-intuitive’ are simply wrong. This article is interested in how the ritual of the first-born sacrifice, the בְּכֻרָה, is portrayed in Numbers 18. The basic argument is that what we have here is clearly a case of ritual innovation; more specifically, it is a case of what Olyan would call “ritual innovation for profit.” Olyan distinguished two kinds of ritual innovation for profit, namely “innovation through the usurpation of another party’s ritual privileges” and “innovation by means of the creative manipulation of established rites”. I will try to show that what we have here in Numbers 18 is somehow a combination of both kinds of ritual innovation described by Olyan.

The article will focus on two important ‘rituals’ in Numbers 18, namely the הַרְוָמִים and the בְּכֻרָה, and will look especially at why they are mentioned in such close proximity. It should also become clear that Numbers 18 alludes to several earlier texts from Exodus and Leviticus – and in this case ‘earlier’ implies both canonically and diachronically. We will also look at Deuteronomy 15, which in my view is also an older text than Numbers 18, although some scholars would disagree with this observation. We do not need to go into the debate on what a ritual is exactly, nor address the problem that what we as Old Testament scholars have is actually not rituals, but texts.

Numbers 18 follows after the complex narrative of Numbers 16-17, where the leadership of both Moses and Aaron is challenged. Challengers include Dathan and Abiram from the tribe of Reuben, who “accuse Moses of abusing power in general”, and Korah from the tribe of Levi, who accuses “Moses and Aaron of abusing priestly power through their hoarding of holiness.” This story of Korah is actually one of those identified by Olyan as being about the usurpation of the privileges of another party.

Most commentators divide Numbers 18 into at least three parts. Verses 1-7 provide some basic ground rules for the different roles played by priests and Levites. We will focus on the second part, namely verses 8 to 20, which is about priestly compensation, while verses 21-31 are about compensation for Levites. Scholars disagree on where to put verse 20: some see it as the concluding frame of verses 8 to 20 and others as the beginning of the last section. The focus of this article is on the middle part.

There are quite a few obvious links with, or allusions to, certain chapters from Leviticus which have already been pointed out by many scholars. Chapters 10 and 27 of Leviticus immediately stand out. With Leviticus 10 the most obvious link is the fact that in Numbers 18 Aaron is addressed directly by YHWH in verses 1, 8 and 20. The only other time that this has happened in the preceding chapters is in Leviticus 10:8. In Leviticus 10 Aaron receives certain instructions from YHWH, including verse 10, which commands priests to distinguish between clean and unclean, and between holy and profane. Thus one clear commonality between the two chapters (Lev. 10 and Num. 18) is that in both Aaron gets the undivided attention of YHWH. In Leviticus 10 he receives this attention after paying quite a high price, namely the death of his two firstborn sons. In Numbers 18 other Israelites, such as Korah, pay a price for their own mistakes in the preceding two chapters, their mistake being to challenge the authority of Moses and Aaron. For scholars who engage with diachronic or redactional-critical issues, chapters 10 and 27 of Leviticus are usually regarded as the latest two chapters added to that book, with Christophe Nihan probably offering the best example for this argument.

Apart from this attention that Aaron receives from YHWH, there are many other allusions to texts in Leviticus at which we will look in a moment. I will first look at intertextual links between Numbers 18 and Leviticus 27, and then spread the net wider to include other texts from Leviticus, especially those from Leviticus 1-7 and also the different בְּכוֹר texts from the books of Exodus and Deuteronomy. Apart from the בְּכוֹר, we will also look at another practice, namely the חַטָאת, which means that in Numbers 19 we will focus especially on verses 14 to 17. With regard to the preceding verses (vv. 8-13) scholars often point out that, on the one hand, we see the most holy offerings (הַקֳּדָש ִׁיָּמִים מַקְדֵּשָׁם) presented in verses 8-10. These are the מַעֲשֵׂatherine, the מַעֲשִׂיא the מַעֲשִׂיא, which are obviously also found in Leviticus 2 and 4-7. These offerings may only be eaten by male priests in the “most sacred precincts”.

On the other hand, from verse 11 onwards we find the lesser offerings, which may be eaten by everyone who is clean in the house of the priest (or literally the addressee, which in this case is Aaron). This second group includes first fruits of grain, wine and oil, as well as the בְּכֹר and the חֵרֶם, to which we will now turn.

The חֵרֶם

Numbers 18:14 refers to ‘every חֵרֶם’, a word which is found nowhere else in the book of Numbers, at least not as a noun. As Brekelmans pointed out a long time ago, apart from the Numeruswechsel in Numbers 18:14, the latter verse is a carbon copy of Ezekiel 44:29b, where incidentally we also find the three offerings just described in verse 9 as “most holy”.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Ezekiel 44:29 (BHS)</th>
<th>Numbers 18:14 (NRSV)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>כָל־חֵרֶם בִּישָׁרֵאֵלְךָ לְּךָ</td>
<td>כל חֵרֶם בִּישָׁרֵאֵלְךָ לְּךָ</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>יְהֹוָה</td>
<td>יְהֹוָה</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>92</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The most important questions with regard to verse 14 are: why mention the חֵרֶם and what does the חֵרֶם actually refer to? The verse only says that the חֵרֶם belongs to Aaron (the addressee), but gives little information on what exactly a חֵרֶם is, or what kinds of things could become חֵרֶם? In order to answer the second question (what does it refer to?), many scholars would immediately mention Leviticus 27:28-29. Thus Gray defines the חֵרֶם as something that “appears to mean anything so dedicated to Yahweh that it could not be redeemed.” Levi ticus 27:28 mentions that nothing that a person “devoted to destruction” may be sold or redeemed and verse 29 adds specifically that any human who was devoted to destruction may not be redeemed, but must be killed. Similar to Gray, the more recently published work by Schmidt posits that חֵרֶם refers to something “das in besonders feierlicher Weise Jahwe übereignet wurde” and then also refers to Leviticus 27:28. In the book of Leviticus חֵרֶם is found only in chapter 27. Apart from the already mentioned verses 28 to 29, it is also found in verse 21. Here חֵרֶם applies to a field (שדה) which had previously been consecrated (v. 19) and ended up being released in the Jubilee, when it becomes a “field of חֵרֶם”, which is followed by the phrase “for the priest it shall be his possession”. It seems that there is a fair amount of overlap between חֵרֶם in Numbers 18:14, where every חֵרֶם now becomes the possession of the addressee (in this case Aaron), and Leviticus 27:21, where חֵרֶם implies something which “for the priest it will be a possession” (לְּכָּל הַגֹּמֶר לְּהוּ). Thus, however the thing became a חֵרֶם, it will eventually end up as the possession of the priest, at least that is the case in Numbers 18:14 and Leviticus 27:21. In both these texts חֵרֶם seems to refer to something becoming the possession of the priest. That is not so clear in verses 28 and 29 (of Lev. 27), where חֵרֶם is actually described as most holy and belonging to YHWH. We could presume that belonging to YHWH means the same as belonging to a priest, but that is not spelled out in verses 28 and 29 as it is in 27:21 and Numbers 18:14.

The meaning of חֵרֶם in itself is a much larger debate, with some scholars distinguishing between a war-חֵרֶם and a peace-חֵרֶם. If one were to maintain that distinction, the question is where Numbers 18:14 would fit in. Should one read it in the context of Leviticus 27, which most scholars regard as an example of the peace-

חֵרֶם?

Or should one read it with texts such as Joshua 6-7 and Deuteronomy 7:28 and 13:18, where the status of חֵרֶם is the result of war? 17 In the light of the previously mentioned links with Leviticus 27, I would rather argue for the former. 18

Another important question with regard to the meaning of חֵרֶם is whether there is some semantic overlap between חֵרֶם and a sacrifice. There are obviously at least two schools of thought on this question. Scholars such as Stern and Nelson deny any similarity between a חֵרֶם and a sacrifice, while others such as Niditch, Tatlock and even Weinfeld and Milgrom argue that there is some overlap. 19 I tend to side with the latter group. In Dozeman’s latest commentary on the book of Joshua he first provides a useful table of the occurrences of the root חֵרֶם distinguishing between cultic use and war use. 20 In this case he thus replaces the classic ‘peace-

חֵרֶם’ with a ‘cultic-

חֵרֶם’ and the only three cases he identifies are Numbers 18:14, Leviticus 27:28, 29 and Ezekiel 44:29. He then argues: 21

The P literature provides a different interpretation of the ban as sacrifice that is undertaken independently of war, which is also evident in Ezek 44. Leviticus 27 is the primary teaching on this view of the ban, where the noun herem occurs five times to characterise a gift that is given to the Deity in a vow.

I would thus presume with Dozeman that the thing called חֵרֶם in Numbers 18 is a kind of a sacrifice similar to that in Ezekiel 44:29 and Leviticus 27:28 and 29, something that might have been given in a vow.

We saw above that ‘most holy’ was used to refer to the offerings mentioned in verses 8-10 of Numbers 18 and that most scholars think that what comes after verse 11 onwards is of a lesser degree of holiness. One fascinating difference between Numbers 18:14 and Leviticus 27:28 is that in the Leviticus text a חֵרֶם is described as קָדָשׁ קָדָשִׁים. Yet in Numbers 18:9 that description is reserved only for the מְנָחָה, the חַטָאת and the אָשָם. Was the חֵרֶם thus downgraded in Numbers 18? Milgrom, in his commentary on Leviticus, finds a way of explaining the discrepancy: 22

Is there, then, a contradiction between Leviticus and Numbers? Not at all. Regarding food, herem is of lesser sanctity and is eligible to be eaten by a priest’s family (Num. 18); regarding its irredeemability, it is most sacred (Lev. 27), in contrast to an impure votive animal (vv. 11-13), a consecrated house or field (vv. 14-25), and an impure firstling (v. 27).

Thus for Milgrom there seem to be two categories, one when food is at stake and one when the possibility of redeeming something appears. I am not sure that I find these different categories convincing, since one does not find these kinds of distinctions with other sacrifices. Stern, for instance, wants to equate חֵרֶם with קָדָשׁ קָדָשִׁים in the light of Leviticus 27:28. 23 He also uses Ezekiel 44:29, where the three most holy sacrifices are mentioned along with the חֵרֶם. Add to that the fact that, as Dozeman reminds us, most definitions provided by scholars for חֵרֶם include descriptions like ‘to separate’ or ‘to set aside’, which sounds a lot like most definitions provided for ‘holiness’, 24 and the occurrence of חֵרֶם in verse 14 becomes very perplexing. Should חֶרֶם not have been mentioned earlier along with the other three sacrifices, as Ezekiel 44 does? Furthermore, one could ask, what is the relation between חֶרֶם and בְּכוֹר? Why are they mentioned in such close proximity to each other? Is it simply some kind of alluding device to Leviticus 27, where they are also mentioned in proximity to each other, albeit in a different order? Does the combination of the two somehow change the meaning of בְּכוֹר, if even slightly? In other words, does the meaning of חֶרֶם somehow rub off onto the meaning of בְּכוֹר? The answer to these questions is not that apparent.

For the time being, it is also important to note that the reference to חֶרֶם in Numbers 18 is much more cryptic than the two references in Leviticus 27. There at least we know that we are talking of a field (v. 21) or an animal or human being (v. 28). In Numbers 18 it is not clear. Yet if Numbers 18 is alluding to Leviticus 27 then those things are presumed.

The בְּכוֹר
As we have just argued, it is fascinating to notice that only in Numbers 18 and Leviticus 27 does one find references to the חֶרֶם and the בְּכוֹר in such close proximity.25 As was pointed out, the important difference is that with regard to the חֶרֶם, one finds less information in Numbers 18 than in Leviticus 27, but with the בְּכוֹר it is the other way around. With regard to Leviticus, the term בְּכוֹר is only found once in 27:26, where it refers to an animal which may not be consecrated (Hiphil of קָדָשׁ) to YHWH, since it already belongs to him.26 There is no mention of a human בְּכוֹר in Leviticus 27. In the book of Numbers בְּכוֹר is used frequently, 25 times to be exact.27 Many of these occurrences are from the genealogies, often referring to the oldest male humans,28 or animals.29 In some cases it also refers to the Levites who are to take the place of an Israelite firstborn.30 This, I suppose, raises the question of why YHWH would need a בְּכוֹר sacrifice in Numbers 18, if he already has the Levites as his own בְּכוֹר? Thus Numbers 3:12 says:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Numbers 3:12 (BHS)</th>
<th>Numbers 3:12 (NRSV)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>ולִי יְהוָה שִׁתְּמֹר כְּבֹר בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל</td>
<td>I hereby accept the Levites from among the Israelites as substitutes for all the firstborn that open the womb among the Israelites. The Levites shall be mine,</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Achenbach, inspired by Budd, offers the classic diachronic answer by arguing that Numbers 3 was written after Numbers 18 as part of his later theocratic layers.31 One important difference is that whereas the Levites are always dedicated to YHWH, the בְּכוֹר in Numbers 18 is dedicated to the priests, even if it is via YHWH. It is also important to distinguish between cases where the firstborn simply refers to the firstborn children or animals, and those cases where some kind of sacrifice seem to be the order of the day. Or, to put it differently, cases where it is clear that ‘to be sacrificed’ or ‘ritually killed’ is what will happen to the firstborn. The latter description fits most of the examples in Numbers 18:15-17:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Numbers 18:15-17 (BHS)</th>
<th>Numbers 18:15-17 (NRSV)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>15 The first issue of the womb of all creatures, human and animal, which is offered to the LORD, shall be yours; but the firstborn of human beings you shall redeem, and the firstborn of unclean animals you shall redeem.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16 Their redemption price, reckoned from one month of age, you shall fix at five shekels of silver, according to the shekel of the sanctuary (that is, twenty gerahs).</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17 But the firstborn of a cow, or the firstborn of a sheep, or the firstborn of a goat, you shall not redeem; they are holy. You shall dash their blood on the altar, and shall turn their fat into smoke as an offering by fire for a pleasing odor to the LORD;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In verse 15 another term for firstborn is used, namely פֶָּטֶר רֶֶ֠חֶם. This term is found in various texts, usually in close proximity to references to the בְּכוֹר. It is also found in Numbers 3:12, where we had the idea of the Levites replacing the firstborn for the first time. One exception would be the notorious Ezekiel 20:26, where the term בְּכוֹר is not used.

It is clear that in Numbers 18:15-17 the בְּכוֹר is destined for the altar. The human בְּכוֹר is to be redeemed (פדה) and the same goes for unclean animals. The verb פדה is found here only in these verses in the book of Numbers and also in Leviticus 27:27 and 29, where it refers to the unclean בְּבוֹר βοε which must be redeemed (v. 27) as well as the human חַרֶם (v. 29), which may not be redeemed and must be killed. The verb also features in some of the Exodus texts we will discuss in a moment. As said before, there is no mention of the human בְּבוֹר in Leviticus 27. Thus Numbers 18:15bβ repeats Leviticus 27:27, or describes the same outcome: every unclean בְּבוֹר animal must be redeemed.
In both cases the בְּכוֹר of the unclean animal must be redeemed, but the prices are slightly different as verse 16 shows. In Numbers 18:16 the price is set at five shekels. In Leviticus the price is based on the assessment of the priest (בערך), to which a fifth is added. This assessment is a set amount and the five shekels in Numbers 18:16 is the equivalent of a male of between one month and five years, according to Leviticus 27:8. These specific details about money are probably why Noth describes Numbers 18:16 and other texts such as Leviticus 27 as examples “of the progressive ‘commercialisation’ of the character of the cult.”

Numbers 18:16 also specifies the value of a shekel at twenty ג רִָׁ֖ה. This specification occurs only five times in the Hebrew Bible, of which one is Leviticus 27:25. One should also add that a few scholars would argue that verse 16 was added later and the text reads much more smoothly as only verses 15 and 17. Furthermore, verse 16 seems to refer to humans, whereas Leviticus 27:26 only refers to unclean animals.

Thus it should be clear that Numbers 18:16 also resonates with different verses from Leviticus 27. The expression ‘בְּשֶָּ֣קֶל הַק ֑דֶש’ is never found again in the Hebrew Bible after this text and is found only in Priestly and post-Priestly texts between Exodus, Leviticus and Numbers, with a high concentration in Numbers 7, where it is used to describe the value of the offerings brought by many tribal leaders. In Leviticus 27:3 the term is used at the beginning of prescriptions discussing the value of human beings dedicated in vows. In 27:25 it concludes a longer section on ‘assessment’ reiterating that the only value to be used is the shekel of the sanctuary.

Numbers 18:17 makes it very clear that the firstborn of cattle, sheep and goats may not be redeemed and their blood must be dashed on the altar and their fat must be burned as “pleasing odour to the Lord”. This language is vintage Leviticus. Usually when blood is splashed, this is done over the altar, but in one instance the people could also be the recipients of the blood. The splashing of blood on the altar is mostly referred to in the book of Leviticus, where it is applicable to the אָשָם (Lev. 7:2), the מְנַחֵה (Lev. 1:5 and 11), the זֵֶ֥בַח שְּלָמ ִׁ֖ים (Lev. 3:2, 8, 13 and 7:14) and the בָּכָר (Lev. 7:2). The reference to the ‘pleasing odour’ is associated with these sacrifices, but also the מְנַחֵה (Lev. 2:2) and the תַּחְיוֹת (Lev. 4:31). Thus suddenly in Numbers 18 the בְּכוֹר seems to be on par with all five offerings in Leviticus 1-7.

Another striking feature of the ritual of the בְּכוֹר in Numbers 18 is the fact that the ritual is described in much more detail than in Leviticus 27, or any of the famous בְּכוֹר texts in Exodus. Part of this detail overlaps to a large extent with the description of the זֵֶ֥בַח שְּלָמ ִׁ֖ים in Leviticus 3. In Numbers 18:17 the fat is to be burned and the same goes for the fat in Leviticus 3:3-5, although other parts are added there such as the kidneys and the appendage of the liver in Leviticus 3. Also in Leviticus 3 the description of the fat is much more elaborate.
Another similarity between the בְּכוֹר and the זֵֶ֥בַח שְּלָמִים in Leviticus is that the portions identified in verse 28 are the same as those reserved for the priest in Leviticus 7:34:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Leviticus 3:3-5</th>
<th>Numbers 18:17-18</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>וְּה קְּרִֽיָּ֨בַח הַשְּלָמִים אֶשֶּ֖ה לְיהוָ֑ה אֶת־הַחֲלֶ֨ב֙ הַֹֽמְּכַסֶָּ֣ה אֶת־הַקֶָׁ֔רֶב וְּא ת֙ כָּל־הַחֲלֶ֔ב אֲשִֶׁ֖ר עַל־הַקֶֹֽרֶב׃</td>
<td>וְּאֶת־הַחֲלֶ֨ב֙ אֲשֶָּ֣ר עֲל הֶָׁ֔ן אֲשִֶׁ֖ר עַל־הַכְּסָלִ֑ים וְּאֶת־הַיְּרֵ֖ת עַל־הַכָּבְּד עַל־הַכְּלָיִ֖וֹת יְּסֻּרָֹֽנָה׃</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>[4]</td>
<td>[4]</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>[3]</td>
<td>[3]</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>יִֽשְׁרִ֖יה:</td>
<td>יִשְׁרִ֖יה:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>[5]</td>
<td>[5]</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

It is strange that these portions are specified in Numbers 18:18, since the priests now get everything in any case. The preposition כ is clearly used to compare. “All their flesh” as it is with the breast and as with the leg now belongs to ‘you’, ‘you’ being Aaron the addressee. Levine explains the problem as follows: 39

Although the law here is clearly modeled on the law of the selāmîm offering, as its formulation indicates, it applies the provisions of that law to another category. The law states that all of the unburned flesh of firstlings is of a status comparable with the specific section of the selāmîm, the breast and thigh, which go to the priests.

It is not clear what is meant by ‘another category’. One should also add that the זֵֶ֥בַח שְּלָמִים is always described as voluntary, yet the impression given by Numbers 18 and all the texts that follow is that it is very much compulsory. 40

What I have tried to show up to this point is that Numbers 18:9-20 often alludes to different chapters from Leviticus. We have chapter 10 with Aaron, being addressed, but most allusions occur in Leviticus 27. In both texts we find laws on the בְּכוֹר and חֶרֶם in close proximity. The reference to the latter is very terse in Numbers 18, but much more elaborate in Leviticus 27, yet with the בְּכוֹר it is the other way around. Apart from these links, what is also clear is that the way in which the בְּכוֹר is described in Leviticus 27 also reminds us of the זֵֶ֥בַח שְּלָמִים in Leviticus 1-7.

We first need to take a step back and have a brief look at the four בְּכוֹר texts in the book of Exodus. Since I presume they are all older than this chapter from the book of Numbers, I will not go into much detail with regard to their diachronic relationship to each other. Any discussion of these texts could take us to the larger debate on human sacrifice in the Hebrew Bible, a debate of which we will try to stay clear.\(^41\) The four texts are Exodus 13:2, 12-13, 22:29 and 34:19-20. In all four texts we find reference to the בְּכוֹר which belongs to YHWH, although different ways are used to express this belonging to YHWH. In each case both humans and animals are mentioned and in two cases (Ex. 13:12-13 and 34:19-20) humans are redeemed. In Exodus 13:2 the verb קֶשׁ (Pi’el) is used to describe the dedication of the בְּכוֹר to YHWH. Later in the same chapter in verses 12-13 the first to open the womb is to be set apart (Hiphil of עבר), the same verb used in Ezekiel 20:26. Verse 13 specifies that donkeys and humans must be redeemed, and now the verb פדה is used as in Numbers 18. Exodus 22:29 demands that the בְּכוֹר of ‘your sons’ must be given (נתן) to YHWH. Lastly, in Exodus 34:19-20 we find a similar command to that of 13:12-13. We find reference to “the one who opens the womb” who belongs to YHWH. This ‘belonging’ is expressed by means of a nominal sentence with לְי in the predicate. In verse 34:20 we hear once again that the donkey and the firstborn son are to be redeemed (again פדה). In none of these verses do we find any additional specifics about how the ritual is to be executed. In Exodus 13:14 we hear that when children were to ask about the meaning of the בְּכוֹר, then the answer will be a retelling of what YHWH did to the firstborn in Egypt and then the parent will add.\(^42\)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Exodus 13:15b (BHS)</th>
<th>Exodus 13:15b (NRSV)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>עליהל עד שא_gate יָֽהוֹ הַפֶּ֖טֶר רֵחֶם הַזְּכָר</td>
<td>Therefore I sacrifice to the LORD every male that first opens the womb, but every firstborn of my sons I redeem.’</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

If there was any doubt that we were talking of a sacrifice, then this makes it clear that a sacrifice is the order of the day. It should also be clear that there is no hint here that these sacrifices will be destined for the priests. But then there is not much clarity on how these sacrifices will be performed, who will eat them, if anyone, and what will happen to the blood.

One should also mention one other text, namely Deuteronomy 15:19-23. This text has many noteworthy features. As in Exodus 13:2 the verb קֶשׁ (Hiphil here, but Pi’el in Exodus 13) is used to describe the dedication of the firstborn. One also finds the verb בָּזָה in verse 21, making it clear that this is a sacrifice. What is different, though, is that here the firstborn is specifically described as ‘male’, something which was absent in all the texts from Exodus as well as Leviticus 27 and Numbers 18. Yet the main difference between this text and the one in Numbers is what Finsterbusch has called the ‘farmer-friendly’ character of Deuteronomy 15, over again the ‘priest-friendly’ character of Numbers 18.\(^43\) In Deuteronomy 15 the farmer and his family eat the בְּכוֹר, but as we know, in Numbers 18 the eating of the בְּכוֹר is reserved for the priests. The same ritual is described to favour two vastly different groups. In Deuteronomy 15 we also read what happens to the blood, but this is poured out like water onto the ground and is not dashed onto the altar as in Numbers 18.
Yet both Numbers 18 and Deuteronomy 15 are different from all the other בְּכוֹר texts simply because they at least provide us with more detail of who eats what, or who stands to gain most from this ritual.

Yet even if one ignores Deuteronomy, the movement between the discussed texts from Exodus and Leviticus to Numbers is clear. In Exodus and Leviticus the בְּכוֹר and to a lesser extent the חֵרֶם belongs to YHWH. In Numbers 18 YHWH hands over the בְּכוֹר to Aaron. If there had been any doubt about what “belonging to YHWH” meant before in Exodus and Leviticus, that doubt has now been removed.

Conclusion

Space does not allow us look at the portrayal of the tithe (מַעֲשֹׂר) in Numbers 18:21-31. The tithe also features after the חֵרֶם in Leviticus 27, where it also belongs to YHWH. It is absent in Exodus, but it is found in Deuteronomy 14:22 -27, where the farmer can eat it. The farmer is encouraged in verse 27 not to neglect the poor Levites, but still he and his family may eat the whole tithe. Yet in Numbers 18:21-31 YHWH hands over the tithe to the Levites, although they need to hand over 10% of that to Aaron. That Deuteronomy is pro-farmer, as Finsterbusch pointed out, is very clear. That Numbers 18 is pro-Aaron is also very clear. Olson reminds us to read these texts with a “healthy hermeneutic of suspicion”:

Readers infected with a healthy dose of a hermeneutics of suspicion may look at this material rather cynically. They may conclude that these stories are simply pro-Aaronic propaganda pieces designed to ensure unquestionable loyalty and support to the one surviving priestly group who had the final word in giving these stories their present shape.

This article, obviously, espouses such a hermeneutics of suspicion, but the aim is more to show how the ‘loyalty’ and ‘support’ mentioned by Olson has been co-opted. We have tried to show how a ritual such as the בְּכוֹר is reinvented to serve the interests of the priests. We tried to show how the text of Numbers 18 echoes other texts such as Leviticus 10 and 27. As in Leviticus 27 בְּכוֹר is mentioned in close proximity to the חֵרֶם, but in different order. The highly devoted חֵרֶם is mentioned first and then followed by the בְּכוֹר, probably in an attempt to add some weight to the meaning of the בְּכוֹר. But then the בְּכוֹר is described in terms reminiscent of the זֵֶ֥בַח שְּלָמִי, probably to a certain extent echoing many of the sacrifices of Leviticus 1-7. One might get the impression that it is written into Leviticus 1-7 retroactively, since it becomes a similar sacrifice where blood is dashed and where a ‘pleasing odour’ lingers. Yet when compared to the four בְּכוֹר texts in Exodus, the most important difference now becomes the fact that YHWH hands over his בְּכוֹר to Aaron. This is something which was probably implied in those texts, but is made explicit now. Olyan’s concept of “creative manipulation” seems appropriate.

One wonders what remains for YHWH, now that he has handed over the בְּכוֹר to Aaron? Well, according to Numbers 18, there is still that lingering ‘pleasing odour’ which is also what Leviticus 1-7 provides, a kind of aromatherapy?
BIBLIOGRAPHY

This article on Numbers 18 reinterpreting earlier texts in the Pentateuch is presented as an offering (not the firstborn kind fortunately) as acknowledgment of the role that Hendrik Bosman played in stimulating the study of the Pentateuch in South Africa. As an under- and postgraduate student of his, I bear witness to this reality.

Saul M. Olyan, “Two Types of Ritual Innovation for Profit,” in Ritual Innovation in the Hebrew Bible and Early Judaism. (ed. N. MacDonald; BZAW 468; Berlin: De Gruyter, 2016), 11-20, here p. 11.

Olyan, “Two Types,” 13-14.

Christophe Nihan, From Priestly Torah to Pentateuch (FAT II 25; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2007), 545-558 and 576-605.

See Dozeman, “Book of Numbers”, 147

The verb הֶרֶם (Hiphil) occurs twice in Numbers 21:2-3.

George B. Gray, A critical and exegetical commentary on Numbers (ICC; Edinburgh: T&T Clark, 1903), 229. See also Seebass, Numeri 10, 11-22, 1, 232.
Levine, Numbers I-20, 447. Levine, for instance, would like to link the הֶרֶם in Numbers 18:14 to Leviticus 27:29, which he then links to Exodus 22:19, where a person is sentenced to death for worshipping other gods. Thus for Levine Numbers 18:14 refers to somebody who forfeited his property when he sacrificed to other gods. This seems like a bit of a stretch, but in the Exodus verse the Hophal of הֶרֶם is used as in Leviticus 27:29. In this interpretation verse 29 is a later addition, which has nothing to do with verse 28. This idea is rejected by many. See Philip D. Stern, The Biblical HEREM. A Window on Israel's Religious Experience (Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1991), 128-131; Erhard S. Gerstenberger, Das 3. Buch Mose. Leviticus (ATD 6: Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1993), 407 and Arend J.K. Hattingh and Esias E. Meyer, “‘Devoted to Destruction’. A Case of Human Sacrifice in Leviticus 27?” Journal for Semitics 25/2 (2016):630-657, here pp. 650-3. For Levine, The Book of Numbers, 350, the text apparently refers to a war-הֶרֶם and he does not seem familiar with the usual distinction between a war- and a peace-הֶרֶם.

Schmidt, Das vierte Buch Mose, 80.

See especially Stern, The Biblical HEREM, 125-135, or, Jacob Milgrom, Leviticus23-27: A New Translation with Introduction and Commentary (AB; New York: Doubleday, 2001; repr., New Haven: Yale University Press, 2010), 2391-2392, who acknowledges that both kinds of הֶרֶם could be attested, but disagrees with Stern on the post-exilic development of the peace-הֶרֶם. Brekelmans, De Herem, 163-170 actually distinguishes between two kinds of peace-הֶרֶם, namely the הֶרֶם as a kind of punishment and the הֶרֶם as a gift. Most other scholars would not make this distinction.

See Levine, Numbers I-20, 436.

It is difficult to be certain, though. Thus Martin Noth. Numbers, A Commentary (trans. James D. Martin; OTL; London: SCM Press, 1968), 136, adds “as if the possibility still existed of a ‘holy war’ in which the booty was to be put under the ‘ban’”, and he then adds Leviticus 27:28-29.

Dozeman, Joshua 1-12, 57.

Milgrom, Leviticus 23-27, 2394. See also his earlier commentary, Jacob Milgrom, Numbers הֶרֶם. (JPS; Philadelphia: The Jewish Publication Society, 1990), 429.

Dozeman, “The Book of Numbers,” 147.

The only other place in the Hebrew Bible where the two terms are found in close proximity is 1 Chronicles 2:3-7. The הֶרֶם is found in 2:3, but refers to the firstborn son and has nothing to do with a possible sacrifice. In 2:7 there is mention of Achar, who “transgressed in the matter of the הֶרֶם.”

As we will see later, this command seems to be directly opposed to Exodus 13:2 and Deuteronomy 15:19, where the Israelites are indeed commanded to ‘consecrate’ (קדש Piel in Ex. and Hiphil in Dt.) the firstborn. Yet Leviticus 27:26 uses the Pual of הֶרֶם to describe this process of belonging to YHWH.

Numbers 1:20, 3:2, 12, 13(x3), 40, 41(x2), 42, 43, 45, 46, 50, 8:16, 17(x2), 18, 18:15(x2), 17(x3), 26:5 and 33:4.

Numbers 1:2, 3:2, 13(x2), 40, 42, 43, 50; 17(x2); 26:5 and 33:4.

Numbers 3:41, 8:17.

Numbers 3:12, 41, 45, 47; 8:16 and 18. In most of these cases the Levites are mentioned as the ones who will take the place of the first born.
Ritual Innovation in Numbers 18?

32 Exodus 13:2, 12(x2), 13, 15, 34:19(x2), Numbers 3:12, 18:15; Ezekiel 20:26 and 2 Chronicles 23:8. In all of these examples, apart from the last two, we also find references to the בְּכוֹר.

33 Noth, Numbers, 136.

34 Exodus 30:13; Leviticus 27:25; Numbers 3:34, 18:16 and Ezekiel 45:12.

35 E.g. Noth, Numbers, 136 and Seebass, Numeri 10, 11-22,1, 232.

36 Exodus 30:13, 24; 38:24, 25, 26; Leviticus 5:15, 27:3, 27:25; Numbers 3:47, 50, 7:13, 19, 25, 31, 37, 43, 49, 55, 61, 67, 73, 79, 85, 86, 18:16. ‘Offerings’ in the case of Numbers 7 does not refer to sacrifices, but mostly to silver plates which were donated to the sanctuary. See Achenbach, Vollendung, 161, for a fascinating discussion which has implications for dating this text. For Achenbach it is clear the temple already has its coins, a fact with which the author of Nehemiah 10:33 is not familiar.

37 Exodus 24:6, 29:16, 20; Leviticus 1:5, 11, 3:2, 8, 13, 7:2, 14, 8:19, 24, 9:12, 18, 17:6; Numbers 18:17; 2 Kings 16:13, 15; Ezekiel 43:18; 2 Chronicles 29:22 (x3). In 2 Chronicles 30:16 and 35:11 the altar is not mentioned, but apparently presumed.

38 Exodus 24:8.

39 Levine, Numbers 1-20, 448.

42 See Hendrik Bosman, “‘What does this mean?’ The Exodus as answer within the inner-biblical discussion of Exod 13,14 with Deut 6,20 and Josh 4,21,” in A Pillar of cloud to guide. Text-critical, Redactional, and Linguistic Perspectives on the Old Testament in Honour of Marc Vervenne. (BETL 269; ed. Hans Ausloos and Bénédicte Lemmelijn; Leuven: Peters, 2014), 31-44, here pp. 32-35. For Bosman the question asked by the children points to a Wisdom influence and he understands 13:1-16 as a “combination of priestly commemoration and scribal instruction.”

44 One exception would be Leviticus 27:21 where the field became חֵרֶם and went to the priest after being released in the Jubilee.

45 See the discussion in Benjamin Kilchör, Mosetora und Jahwetora. Das Verhältnis von Deuteronomium 12-26 zu Exodus, Levitikus und Numeri (BZAR 21; Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz Verlag, 2015), 161, where he sums up the laws on the firstborn in three stages. In the Exodus texts the firstborn belongs to YHWH. In Numbers 18 the firstborn is destined for the priesthood. Kilchör’s third stage is then Deuteronomy 15, where the firstborn is given to the farmer. This last portrayal of Deuteronomy, from a diachronic perspective, will obviously be disputed by many scholars, myself included. What is clear is that Deuteronomy and Numbers have totally opposing views.

47 See Seebass, Numeri 10, 11-22, 1, 220, who regards verses 21-24 as very diplomatic towards the Levites.